Foreword

This two-volume publication is a reference guide to the men and women who have served in the Kentucky legislature since 1900. Members are listed in alphabetical order and by county for the 56 regular sessions from 1900-2005. Volume I contains data for members who served from 1900-1949; volume II includes members who served from 1950-2005. Each volume has tables that identify House and Senate leadership for the sessions noted, Senate and House district maps for each session, and information on the evolution of some of the constitutional provisions relating to the legislature.

This publication includes most, but not all, persons elected to the legislature. It only documents service in regular and extraordinary sessions of the General Assembly. It omits members who served only partial terms that did not include legislative sessions following their predecessors' deaths or resignations.

Legislative districts are coded H001 through H100 for members of the House and S001 to S038 for members of the Senate. Members who represented more than one district due to redistricting or who served in both chambers have an entry for each district they represented.

A map of Kentucky counties and a key to codes denoting party affiliation, year of birth, sex, race, occupation, home county, and leadership service are provided in the appendix to each volume. This document omits any biographical data that was not available.

This publication presents information from the House Journal, the Senate Journal, the Official Manual of Kentucky, and other sources. The LRC library, the Kentucky Historical Society, and the Kentucky Division of Archives and Records provided information for this publication.

Kentucky Legislature

The Kentucky General Assembly has met in regular session 56 times since 1900. Under Kentucky's 1891 Constitution, the legislature has convened the first Tuesday after the first Monday of January in even-numbered years and adjourned no more than 60 working days later. A constitutional amendment in 2000 established odd-year legislative sessions limited to 30 working days. Additionally, the governor called the General Assembly to meet in extraordinary sessions (also called special sessions) another 54 times, with 36 of these sessions occurring since 1950.

Since 1900, there have been 3,076 persons to serve in a regular or special session of the General Assembly. Of that total, 72 were women; 25 were African Americans; 2,008* were elected from the Democratic Party; 1,066 were elected from the Republican Party; 1 was elected from the Fusion Party; and 1 was elected as an Independent. Legislative districts were redrawn in the House nine times: following the 1918, 1942, 1971, 1972, 1982, 1991, 1992 (partial plan), 1996, and 2002 regular and special sessions. In the Senate, districts were redrawn seven times: after the 1918, 1942, 1972, 1982, 1991, 1996, and 2002 regular and special sessions.

There were several milestones of the Twentieth Century legislature:

- 1910 - First session of the General Assembly in the current Capitol;
- 1910-1914 - First time a father and son served in the same chamber for the same term—Sen. B.M. Arnett (D-Nicholasville) and Sen. Louis W. Arnett (D-Covington);
- 1912 - Last of Kentucky's 120 counties created (McCreary);
- 1920 - First Republican Speaker of the House—Joseph F. Bosworth (R-Middlesboro);
- 1922 - First woman elected—Mary E. Flannery (D-Catlettsburg) to the House of Representatives;
- 1936 - First African American elected—Charles W. Anderson, Jr. (R-Louisville) to the House of Representatives; and
- 1962 - First African American woman elected—Amelia Tucker (R-Louisville) to the House of Representatives.

Curtis F. Burnham (D-Richmond) was the oldest person to serve, being 86 while a member of the 1906 Senate. The youngest person to serve was Elmer L. Brown (D-Owensboro), who was 24 years, 2 months when elected in 1914 to the House of Representatives. James E. Bruce (D-Hopkinsville), currently representing the 9th House district, has the longest tenure of legislators with service beginning in 1964. Conversely, the shortest tenure was that of Sen. Spencer L. Cobb (D-Nicholasville), who died 2 hours after taking the oath of office, January 1, 1962, the day before the 1962 Regular Session convened. Since he did not actually serve in a session in the General Assembly, Cobb is not counted among those serving.

* Subsequent to their reelection as Democrats, Sen. Dan "Malano" Seum, Sen. Robert J. Leeper, and Rep. Thomas Kerr switched their party affiliation to Republican in July 1999, August 1999, and October 2003 respectively.

 Subsequent to his reelection as Republican, Sen. Robert J. Leeper switched his party affiliation to Independent in January 2005.

Methodology

The House Journal, the Senate Journal, and legislative directories provided legislative district, tenure, county of residence, and party affiliation data. However, because selected biographical data on members has only been maintained since the General Assembly began occupying the current Capitol in 1910, records kept by other state and local agencies or organizations were used to supply missing data, such as year of birth and occupation, for members who served between 1900 and 1910. Sources used include contemporary directories, newspaper accounts, local history/genealogical materials, census data, obituaries, death certificates, and cemetery records.

Members are identified by a given name, if known. Those members identified by their initials only either were known generally by their initials or are identified this way in available records. The year of birth is the date reported by the member, if available, or the date taken from an official or family record such as a death certificate or family document. The occupation listed is the primary occupation reported by the member, if available, or the occupation of the member at the time of election. Due to space limitations, only one occupation is listed for each member, although many members listed several concurrent occupations (for example: Banker, Attorney, Farmer), or biographical sources indicated a change of occupations in the course of a lifetime. Page 393 lists county codes. A key to all other codes is on page 395.

1. A Constitutional History of the Kentucky General Assembly

A Constitutional History of the Kentucky General Assembly

Since Kentucky became a state in 1792, the General Assembly has undergone a number of changes resulting from the adoption of subsequent state constitutions in 1799, 1850, and 1891. In general, these changes have related to how often the General Assembly meets; when it convenes; and the number, election date, requirements of office, and terms for representatives and senators.

The original Constitution provided that the two chambers of the General Assembly—the House of Representatives and the Senate—meet annually for no set period of time and convene the first Monday in November of each year, unless changed by the legislature or the governor. Additionally, it allowed the governor to call an extraordinary session at any time.

The 1792 Constitution required a representative to be at least 24 years of age, a citizen and inhabitant of the state for two years, and a resident of the county in which he was chosen for at least six months. A minimum of 40 and a maximum of 100 representatives were to be elected, with the exact number to be determined by the legislature, based on the number of free male inhabitants older than 21 in each county. Representatives were elected for one-year terms in an election held on the first Tuesday in May.

State senators were not elected directly by the people but were selected by electors elected at the same time and in the same number as representatives. These electors were required to be at least 27 years of age and residents of the state for three years. The electors met on the third Tuesday in May and selected by ballot state senators, who were required to be at least 27 years of age and residents of the state for two years. The electors selected a minimum of 11 senators, with one additional senator for every four representatives added, as determined by the census. Senators served four-year terms.

These same electors also selected the governor of Kentucky to serve a four-year term, with no limit on the number of terms. Clergymen were prohibited to serve in the General Assembly.

Under Kentucky's second constitution, adopted in 1799, the General Assembly continued to convene annually on the first Monday in November, unless the date was changed by the legislature. The governor could no longer change the regular meeting date but could still call an extraordinary session when necessary.

The requirements for a representative remained the same as provided in the 1792 Constitution, except that county residency was increased from six months to one year. The minimum number of representatives was increased from 40 to 58, with any additional representatives based on the number of free male inhabitants older than 21. The maximum number remained 100, and the term of office remained one year. The election date was changed from May to the first Monday in August.

The greatest change in the General Assembly was the direct election of senators for four-year terms. A transition schedule provided that at the first session of the General Assembly after the adoption of the Constitution, senators would be divided into four classes: one class to serve one year, another two years, another three years, and another four years. Thereafter, senators would be elected for four-year terms. In this way, one-fourth of the Senate was elected each year instead of all members standing for re-election every four years, as was previously done. The requirements for senator were also changed to a minimum age of 35, six years' residency in the state, and one year's residency in the district. The minimum number of senators was fixed at 24, and the maximum number at 38. The legislature continued to set the number of representatives and senators. Clergymen still were prohibited from serving.

Kentucky's third constitution provided that the General Assembly meet annually in 1850 and 1851, then biennially in odd-numbered years, and convene on the first Monday in November for no set period of time. As in previous constitutions, it also authorized the governor to call an extraordinary session.

The requirements of office and the election date for representatives remained unchanged from those of the 1799 Constitution, but their terms were extended to two years, and the number of representatives was set at 100.

Senators continued to be elected for four-year terms but were divided into two classes so that one-half would be elected every two years. The age requirement was lowered to 30, and the number of senators was set at 38. Residency requirements for representatives and senators remained the same as established in 1799. Clergymen still could not serve in the General Assembly.

Kentucky's fourth and current constitution, adopted in 1891, made significant changes that affected the General Assembly. Sessions were limited to 60 legislative days every two years. The convening time of the session was changed from November to the first Tuesday after the first Monday in January of even-numbered years. Additionally, the General Assembly could no longer change the date of convening.

Age and residency requirements and the length of terms for legislators remained the same. The number of representatives and senators remained 100 and 38 respectively. The date of elections, however, was changed from the first Monday in August to the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November. For the first time, clergymen became eligible to serve in the General Assembly.

Other Changes to the Kentucky General Assembly

1968

A major statutory change in the makeup of the General Assembly occurred in 1968 with the establishment of the interim committee system. Interim joint committees enable the members of the General Assembly to gather information and discuss issues between the sessions of the General Assembly.

1972

Since the 1972 Session, legislators are permitted to prefile bills for the consideration of the upcoming General Assembly. Through this procedure, bills are ready for introduction on the first day of the session and can begin the legislative process immediately.

1978

In 1978, the General Assembly passed—and the voters of Kentucky subsequently ratified—a constitutional amendment altering the election and the terms of service of the legislature.

The Kenton Amendment—named for House Speaker William G. Kenton, who sponsored the measure—moved the election of state legislators from odd- to even-numbered years. Further, the amendment established organizational sessions of the General Assembly to be held in January of odd-numbered years, which were to last no longer than 10 days. The measure also prohibited regular sessions of the General Assembly from lasting past April 15.

To implement the Kenton Amendment, House members elected in 1981 served three-year terms. Senators elected in 1981 and 1983 were given five-year terms. Thus, the electoral process was in place fully for the 1986 legislative elections.

A Constitutional History of the Kentucky General Assembly

Since January 1983, biennial organizational sessions of the General Assembly have been held to elect legislative leadership, adopt chamber rules, and appoint standing and statutory committees. Note that a 1992 constitutional amendment removed the lieutenant governor as President of the Senate. That position now is filled by a member of the Senate elected during the organizational session.

2000

In November 2000, voters in Kentucky approved a constitutional amendment allowing for a 30-day regular session in odd-numbered years. The odd-year session begins in January for a short organizational period that usually lasts one week and then reconvenes on the first Tuesday in February. A restriction to the odd-year sessions is a requirement that any bill raising revenue or appropriating funds be passed by a three-fifths majority of the members of each chamber. No regular session in an odd-numbered year may extend beyond March 30.
